Happy Valentine's Day

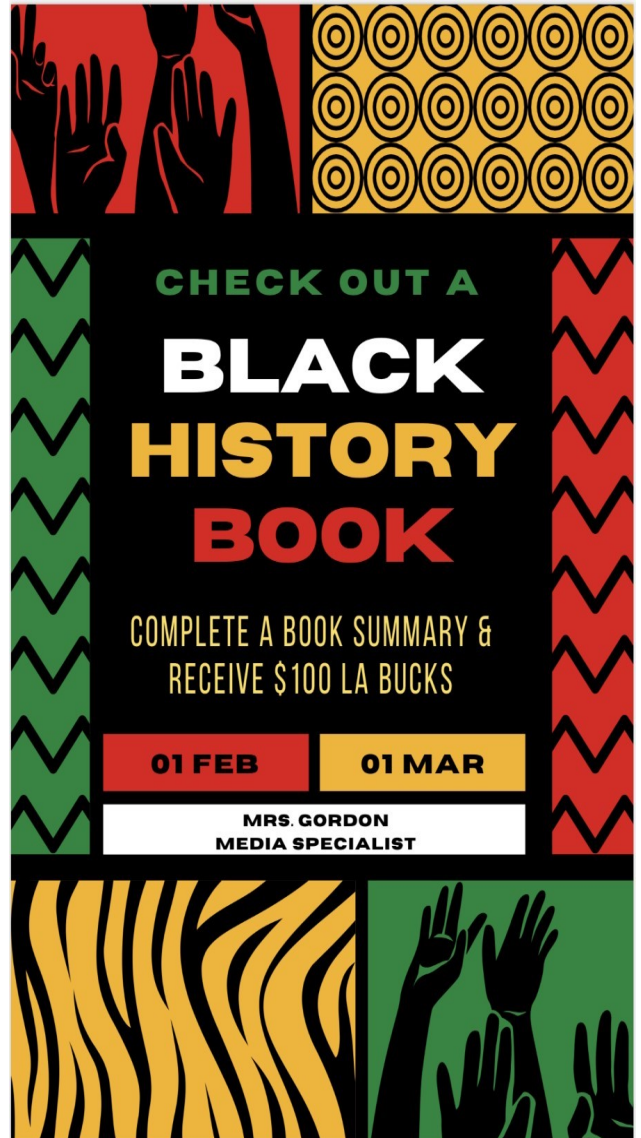

Thorndike Barnhart defines love as a warm and tender liking; deep feeling of fondness and friendship; great affection or devotion. As Valentine Day approaches on February 14, 2022, let's remember to show love to our friends, family, colleagues, classmates, and even people we don't know. The one thing this world does not have enough of is love. Do your part today to increase the world's store of this invaluable resource.

The month of February is celebrated throughout the country as Black History Month. As we reflect upon the many great accomplishments of several of our leaders, we must not forget that each one of our students has the ability to accomplish great things. The following Black Americans are the first black Americans to realize pioneering achievements in their fields. With talent and determination, each one of them reinvented not only what it meant to be an African American, but also what it meant to be an American. These African Americans overcame the obstacle of discrimination and achieved top honors in their chosen fields.

Arthur Ashe
